Ph.D. thesis

Title: Grammar and textuality: A structural linguistic study of text-types Modern Welsh

Advisors: Erich POPPE (Philipps-Universität Marburg) and Lea SAWICKI (Hebrew University of Jerusalem)

Abstract: A linguistic study of the means of text construction and organisation in Literary Modern Welsh, focussing on three textual components: anecdotes in autobiographical texts, reporting of speech in short stories, and stage directions in plays. The main corpus consists of the textually diverse writings of Kate Roberts.

Master's thesis

Title: A textual-structural study of the demonstrative pronouns in Old English: Classification, characterisation and description of the examples in Ælfric's Lives of Saints

Advisor: Nimrod BARRI OBM (Hebrew University of Jerusalem)

Abstract: Description of the syntactical structures in Old English, in which the demonstrative pronouns (se and ðis) occur independently of a following nominal phrase: structural classification, characterisation and analysis of their internal structure and their function in the text by a comprehensive examination of the examples in the corpus, Ælfric's Lives of Saints.
